Dean's Message

Dear Students and Esteemed Readers,

Near East University Faculty of Health Sciences commenced its educational journey in the 2007–2008 academic year, holding the distinction and privilege of being the first institution in Cyprus to provide education in the fields of health professions. Taking into account the requirements of continuous education as well as social and community needs, new departments have been established, offering prospective professionals with environments that foster effective training in their chosen fields. As of the 2024–25 Academic Year, our Faculty offers ten undergraduate programs in Turkish and three in English. Additionally, it provides five master's programs and three doctoral programs.

In line with the vision of Near East University, our Faculty embraces the goal of becoming "a faculty recognized internationally through its academic, educational, and scientific activities." To this end, a teaching model based on contemporary educational approaches has been adopted; interactive methods such as case analyses, projects, classroom activities, group work, and discussions are incorporated to encourage students' active participation in the learning process. Our academic staff, through their research and scientific publications, closely follow developments in their respective fields, thereby enriching the educational process.

The curricula of our undergraduate programs are designed to provide a balanced integration of theoretical knowledge and practical experience. Active Student Clubs and rich library resources support and enhance the learning experience, making it both effective and enjoyable. Opportunities for internships and employment are also offered through large hospitals and affiliated institutions.

Our distinction lies in our pursuit of making a difference!

Primarily, we strive to make a difference through the education we provide and the scientific research we conduct. Equally, we aim for our graduates to become professionals who will make a difference in their careers. It is among our core values to raise graduates who are not merely "accepted" as health professionals but are "preferred and sought after." We are engaged in a great race, and our first race is with ourselves. We do not have the luxury of repeating the previous day. We must progress step by step—toward better, more beautiful, and more successful outcomes. Ultimately, our aim is to rank among the world's best Faculties of Health Sciences. It is with great pleasure that we welcome you as a part of the Near East University Faculty of Health Sciences. We wish you a successful and productive academic year and hope that you will always stand with us to foster collective wisdom and to look toward the future together.

Prof. Dr. Adile Öniz Özgören

Head of Department's Message

Dear Audiology Department Student,

Welcome to the Department of Audiology. Congratulations on being selected as a healthcare professional we can be proud of, demonstrating excellent potential for development and success both academically and clinically. The field of audiology is a profession comprised of dedicated and hardworking individuals dedicated to supporting the health needs of individuals experiencing communication, hearing, and balance difficulties.

With our support, we hope you will have high expectations for yourself and for this degree program, which will prepare you for four years to become an independent healthcare professional worthy of the title "Audiologist." It's clear that the journey from first-year student to qualified practitioner is long and challenging. As you progress through the program, we will do our utmost to ensure you are equipped with the necessary study skills, knowledge, and understanding to take you further.

However, succeeding in a challenging professional degree program requires great dedication and continuous effort on your part as a student. You will become familiar with the terms "independent learner" and "research-based learning," meaning you are expected to be the driving force of your own learning experience. If you are to become a respected clinician and/or researcher, able to work independently and stay current at the end of your studies and throughout your career, it's crucial to make it clear from the outset that you must take responsibility for your own learning.

We strive to support you and ensure you are fully equipped and prepared intellectually, practically, and emotionally for the many challenges you will face as a health sciences student. To cope with the diverse and challenging learning experiences of this health program, you will need physical health, mental agility, and emotional resilience.

Additional Information

To graduate, students must successfully complete courses totalling 240 ECTS credits. Business/Business Administration students are required to fulfil both compulsory and technical elective course requirements to meet the 240 ECTS graduation threshold. Otherwise, they will not be considered eligible for graduation.

A minimum attendance rate of 70% is mandatory in all courses across our programs. Students who fail to meet this requirement receive an NA (Never Attended) grade for the relevant course. This grade is given to those who do not satisfy the attendance condition and lose the right to participate in end-of-term evaluations. The NA grade is not included in the GPA calculation.

In future semesters, students must still fulfil the 70% attendance requirement for the same course. However, in the case of a course repeated due to an FF (Failing Grade), the 70% attendance requirement is not enforced.

Important Notes on Elective Courses

Students enrolled in the International Law program are required to complete at least 12 elective courses to graduate. These courses must be selected from the approved list of electives provided within the program. Courses that are not included in this list will not be recognized as electives. The ECTS credit value of each elective course must be equal to or greater than the credit values specified in the curriculum.

Exam Regulations, Evaluation and Grading

At our university, student performance is generally assessed through in-person examinations, including a midterm exam and a final exam. However, in some courses, alternative assessment methods—such as project assignments, presentations, homework, quizzes, and group work—are also employed to encourage active participation and evaluate a range of skills.

The method of assessment for each course may vary depending on the nature of the course and the instructor's approach. Assessment criteria are communicated to students at the beginning of the semester and are clearly outlined in the course syllabus.

The final course grade is calculated based on the weighted average of all evaluations conducted throughout the term, including exams, assignments, and any additional components. Therefore, students are expected to actively engage not only in exams but in all forms of assessment during the semester. At Near East University, students receive one of the letter grades described below for each course, based on the assessment conducted by the course instructor. Each letter grade corresponds to a specific ECTS credit weight.

To access this system, each student is provided with a student ID number and a personal password by the faculty secretary. After selecting their courses through the system, students must also obtain approval from their academic advisors via the same platform.

The registration process is also outlined on the university's official website. However, students who have not paid their tuition fees or submitted their payment receipts to the Student Affairs Office will not be able to proceed with online registration. Final approval of course registration is completed by the academic advisors of the department.

Additionally, students may complete course registration by meeting in person with their academic advisors within their departments. During the registration period, as indicated in the academic calendar, students are expected to consult with their advisors for course selection and academic guidance.

During this period, students can attend their registered courses and, if they wish, make changes by adding or dropping courses. All course withdrawal, course change, or course addition procedures must be completed within the dates specified in the academic calendar. Students must consult with their academic advisors to carry out the requested changes.

Lateral and Vertical Transfers

After the application is approved, the student must provide an official transcript from their previous university to the department they have been admitted to.
